

CHAPTER THREE

Education & Training: What Does Utah Have to Offer?

general info

Between 1990 and 1999, enrollment in Utah's public education system increased by 31,200 students or 7 percent. While the number of children in the system has been growing steadily, it has leveled off a bit in the late 1990's. However, it is expected to increase again starting around 2003, when the grandchildren of the Baby Boomers begin entering school. Utah has the highest rate of students attending public schools in the nation. 97.5% attend public schools (vs. private schools) compared to 90.1% nationally.

Despite the large number of children in Utah's school system, Utah has the highest literacy rate in the country and a high number of high school graduates. Class sizes in Utah are large and the per-pupil expenditure for education is the lowest in the nation. Yet, students' scores on the Stanford Achievement Test are comparable to national averages. It is believed this is due to a culture in which education is valued. During 1999, 89 percent of Utah students enrolled at the beginning of their senior year graduated from high school.

Forty public school districts exist in the state under the administration of the Utah Office of Education (<http://www.usoe.k12.ut.us/>) School attendance is compulsory for students aged six through 18 (or high school graduation).

A child must be five years of age by September 1 of the current school term and parents must furnish legal proof of age and immunization records for their children before they can be enrolled in school. Specific information concerning the schools of a particular district may be obtained from the local superintendent of schools, listed in the appendix. In addition to the public school system, a number of private and church affiliated schools also meet state educational standards.

higher education

The Utah System of Higher Education (USHE) consists of nine public colleges and universities. You can begin your postsecondary education with short term applied technology training, a certificate program, a two-year associate degree, or a four-year bachelor degree, in Utah's higher education institutions.

Enrollment in Utah's higher education system has increased slightly, around 2.5% per year, in the past few years. This trend is projected to continue through 2020.

Requirements for Resident Classification: Adults or emancipated minors must prove they have established permanent domicile in Utah (which requires physical presence in the state with the intention to remain there permanently). If they have come to Utah to attend an institution of higher education, they must reside in Utah one continuous year prior to the registration period for which resident student status is sought as well as providing evidence of intent to remain permanently.

Public Colleges and Universities

Applied Technology Education

The Utah System of Higher Education works in partnership with the State Office of Education to provide Applied Technology Education (ATE) for students who choose to pursue vocational education which can lead to high paying career opportunities after completing high school. Applied Technology Education programs are available at colleges and universities, applied technology centers and applied technology center service regions. Enrollment is open year-round and there are little or no application fees. Potential students may be assessed for math and reading skills to ensure they possess the necessary skills to succeed in training. The average tuition and fees for full-time students attending these applied technology centers are generally less than college tuition per nine-month school year. There is no on-campus housing available at any of the schools.

You can contact the individual schools for further information regarding the details of the programs they offer. Most of the schools have brochures they can send to you describing their facilities and the application process.
